

TÜRK. PEDIATRİ ARŞİVİ

TURKISH ARCHIVES of PEDIATRICS

Editorial

Dear colleagues,

I mentioned the introduction and importance of international indexing in a previous paper related with indexing of journals (1). The Turkish Archives of Pediatrics is included in many national and international indexes. Since the beginning of the year 2014, we have been included in “PubMed Central”, which is one of the most important among these indexes. This is a success for our national magazine publishing. We started to lay the foundations of this success in 2002. Although our journal was being published in Turkish, we initiated our English infrastructure works for web publishing, which was starting to develop during those years. Currently, your articles accepted for publication in our journal are being translated into English by a professional team. We think that it is a great convenience for authors in terms of not limiting the scientific vocabulary. As a result of this, the readability of your articles increases day by day. It is possible to learn the number of views of any article, journal or only an article of yours indexed in “PubMed Central”, which is considered one of the most important international indexes and the one that is referred to most commonly (2). Although seven review articles lead the most commonly read 25 articles in the Turkish Archives of Pediatrics in the last 12 months, research articles and interesting cases constitute the majority. We continue our studies in order to increase the number of views and to obtain the place we deserve in other international indexes.

As you know, we definitely include up-to-date and interesting review articles in each issue of our journal. I think that you will devour and finish the review titled “Nutritional glycotoxins and formulas” written by Professor Dr Tufan Kutlu who is an international expert in his area, and that this article will enter the top of the next “first 25.” Case presentation articles are being published with a limited number in each issue because of our wish to comply with the rules of international indexes. However, I guess that you will find the case presentations in this issue so interesting as to compete with research articles.

Our research articles are the most important power for our journal to be at the top. At the same time, they have been presented to you as a product of meticulous work such that they would be cited in the literature. We are sure that they will be cited enthusiastically when you write studies related with these issues.

References

1. Apak H. Editorial. Available from: URL: <http://dergipark.ulakbim.gov.tr/tpedar/issue/view/5000000212>. 2010: 45: 2.
2. NIHMS Users: Do You Know How Often Your Paper is Being Accessed Via PMC? Here's How to Find Out. Available from: URL: <http://wp.me/p2Tuqy-9B>

Dr. Hilmi Apak
Editor